

Is this program right for me?

Do you believe someone in recovery from substance use can help you in your own recovery journey? Would extra motivation and encouragement from an ally who believes in your capacity for change be beneficial? Have you found that traditional forms of recovery support have not been enough or just too short?

Are there still barriers and obstacles that you wish to overcome? Are there goals you wish to achieve that will strengthen your recovery? Are there additional resources that you may need help connecting to? If so, are you willing to receive help?

Let a Recovery Coach help you.

What can I expect if I participate in Peer 2 Peer Recovery Coach Project?

A Recovery Coach is a motivator and cheerleader that believes in a recoveree's capacity for change. They are an ally and confidant, always prepared to actively listen.

You can expect a coach to be a truth teller who provides honest feedback and offers suggestions. They are a role model and offer their own life as an example of healthy living.

A coach can help you identify problem areas and assist you as a recoveree to problem solve. They can provide linkages to the recovery community, treatment, and other supports. They are an advocate and can act as a representative for the recoveree when requested.

Your coach is an equal and recovery advocate.

“ My Recovery Coach has supported my journey through my stay in Residential Treatment, and transition to Sober Living over the last year. My coach has helped by motivating me, sharing their own recovery, connecting me to other supports, helping me set and achieve my goals, but most importantly my coach believed in me.” ~ Davis
